A 3-Day Foundation Workshop Using Action Learning

In this workshop, you will gain first hand experience in the nature & dynamics of coaching circles. You will participate in dialogues & practice being a member & a facilitator of a circle. You will work on your own project or challenge (being a client) & support others in their respective projects through collaborative inquiry & coaching. By observing the workshop facilitator & by experiencing this role yourself, you will discover what is needed to intervene effectively in typical situations faced by a coaching circle. You will be coached both in advancing your project, but also in enhancing your competence as a facilitator. Upon completing the program, you have the ability to design & lead coaching circles in your organization or with clients.

Charles Brassard is leading the workshop. Charles has trained coaches, organizational development professionals and other human development specialists for over 20 years in the design & facilitation of Coaching Circles. Charles is also a senior faculty member with New Ventures West and co-founder of Convivium, an integral coaching school offering the NVW professional coaching course in French in Canada and France.

Coaching circles combine the power of action learning & integral development coaching to support leaders in creatively tackling the challenges they face while practicing the coaching skills they need on the job.

This technology quickly expands the reach and payback of coaching in organizations & extends the benefits derived from leadership & management development programs. Coaching circles & individual coaching also work in tandem to deepen the learning experience & practice of managers and leaders.

Tuition: 1,500.00 GBP* (1,200 GBP if self-funded). This includes one coaching session following the workshop.
